

Glasscock Internal Faculty Residential Fellowship

Required Signatures for Application

Four internal fellowships will be awarded annually, but split into two per semester. This award is designed to address release time for tenured associate or full professors only.

Fellowship holders are expected to participate in the intellectual life of the Center by being in residence at Texas A&M University during the release semester and by occupying the office provided in the Center. Recipients of the award are required to participate in the Faculty Colloquium Series during the year in which they hold the fellowship. Recipients will present their work-in-progress during the semester in residence. Projects will be chosen on the basis of their intellectual rigor, scholarly creativity, and potential to make a significant impact in the candidate's career and field.

To be eligible, faculty may not have been on leave (internally or externally funded) in the year prior to the fellowship year. Preference may be given to those who have not received Glasscock leave support previously.
